“STRIKING SIX” PROGRESSIVE CUT LOOSE FROM PARTY TIES ARE TERMED “GINGER GROUP”

Signed by six members of the Progressive group of the house of commons, a letter has been sent to Robert Forke, leader of the party which states, in effect, the intention of the writers to refrain from attending any more caucuses of the party on the ground that the principles on which they were originally elected had not been adhered to.

Those signing the letter are Messrs H. N. Campbell, MacKenzie, Robert Gardiner, Medicine Hat; E. J. Garland, Bow River; D. M. Kennedy, West Edmonton; H. E. Spencer, Battle River; and Miss Agnes MacPhail, Southeast Grey.

The letter concludes: “We desire, however, to make it perfectly clear that we are free to cooperate with all others and invite and welcome the assistance and support of those of all parties who genuinely desire legislation such as will best promote the interests of Canada as a whole.”

Stating that their task was to represent their constituencies by cooperating in parliament with parties and groups so as to secure the best possible legislation for Canada as a whole, the members assert that these principles have been departed from and that the present parliamentary organization of the Progressive groups “tends to perpetuate the type of partisanship” which the Progressive movement was started to protest against.

GORDON—PATERSON

A wedding of more than ordinary interest was celebrated in the Westminster Church, Chauvin, on Friday June 20th, when Johnanna, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Paterson became the bride of Andrew Gordon one of the popular and prosperous farmers of the Marsden district. The church which had been specially decorated was filled to capacity with relatives and friends of the happy couple. Rev. W. MacKenzie officiated at the ceremony, the bride being supported by her maids, Miss Jean McGladery and Miss Chrissie Gordon. The former being teacher at the Brady school and the latter sister to the groom. The groom was supported by Mr. Robert [redacted] and Mr. George Paterson. Special music was rendered by Mrs. D. W. Pareels and Mrs. H. N. Freeman who also sang a solo.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. D. W. Pareels took snapshots of the wedding party after which all adjourned to the Killarney Hotel where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was waiting the party of over forty guests. After the bride had cut the cake much merriment arose when it became the duty of the groom to cut the groom's cake, with the aid of the best man this was performed in a capable manner. Rev. W. MacKenzie proposed toast to the happy couple; and at the end of the feast briefly expressed the good wishes of the assembly.

The festivities were continued at the Brady school at which an enormous crowd of some one hundred and fifty persons gathered. This was in fact a tribute to the popularity of the bride who has earned an high place in the esteem of all by her own character and her activities Sunday school, Ladies Aid, and in all other forms of community work. The music was supplied by members of the family of Councillor G. Mitchell with organ, violin, cello, and sasophone. A sumptuous supper was served at midnight and again the wedding cakes formed a feature of the repast. After supper Mrs. Frank Wright entertained the party with a song; and Mr. K. W. Coe suitably expressed the good wishes of the gathering and conveyed them to the happy couple.

With lowered lights and the silvery rays of the moonlight streaming in the window, the moonlight waltz provided a scene of more than ordinary beauty and charm. Such was the keenness of the enjoyment of all present that dancing was continued until long after daylight.

Local Crop Report

Considerable variance of opinion regarding crop prospects is apparent at the time of writing. Rain is needed in all parts of the district. Generally speaking wheat sown early on well prepared land is standing up well though very short in growth it has developed an excellent root system and is stooling well. Later sowings do not appear to be progressing so favorably and already show signs of drought by yellowing of leaves.

Heavy Grain Shipments Via Vancouver

Nearly 50,000,000 bushels of grain have been handled from the prairie provinces, chiefly Alberta, over the Pacific Route via Vancouver in the 1923-24 season, to May 31, compared with less than 18,000,000 bushels handled in the same period in the previous season. This is an indication of the manner in which the Western route has developed in the past year. Of these shipments about 34,500,000 bushels went to the United Kingdom and Europe via Panama, and about 13,800,000 to the Orient.

Editorial Comment

What an enormous difference can be made in our individual viewpoints by a good fall of rain. Truly we are all more or less creatures of circumstances, strangely affected by the vicissitudes to which we are subject, and as the need of rain becomes more urgent so does our outlook on everything become blacker and blacker.

Meeting neighbours, who need rain as urgently as ourselves, we exchange dull flat greetings and indulge in morbid prophesies, until the whole community is affected by a general feeling of "What's the use anyway?"

We come to believe everything is wrong. Even the sports days and picnics which should be enjoyed by all seem to become so much of a nuisance and a burden. Everything our council and school trustees do is wrong. Our neighbors become all kinds of bad people, and we are on the verge of disaster and bankruptcy. Such are the false beliefs that so readily gain admission to our thoughts, simply because we are too keenly affected by the lack of a rain storm. It is a form of summer complaint to which we are more or less liable. It is very highly infectious and spread with as great a speed as does such epidemics as the "flu."

The remedy for this "panicky" feeling is the application of good "common sense" and the exercise of more mental stamina. Instead of milling around like a bunch of frenzied cattle, or running away like frightened horses, we should make use of our superior human intellect and retain a cheerful sanity. With a little increase of mental effort we can spread cheer around, and the gloom-mongers (like all creatures of darkness) will creep away to their holes.

Another breaking on the political horizon. Even the small band of "Progressives" cannot hold together and a small detachment breaks away from the "caucus" to be promptly named the "Ginger Group."

The cleavage is a natural one. Whether, or not, it is "good politics" we will not at this time venture an opinion. Perhaps because so few of us have advanced sufficiently far into the depths of to produce a remedy for all political economy that we are unable to produce a remedy for all the ills that afflict our fair dominion. And on the other hand the cleavage may result in more good than is now apparent, since so much political activity seems to be expended in purely party differences instead of the problems of the dominion.

What, we ask, would be the result if we could forget all about conservatism, liberalism, capitalism and trade unionism and in their place get down to government with a real viewpoint by appointing men who understood social and commercial problems in a practical manner. In a word, substitute practical for theoretical knowledge?

The government of a country may be compared to the control of a large departmental store in which every department must receive careful administration to the end that each and every department may be profitable.

At the same time, governments nowadays have many tasks that more closely resemble the many responsibilities of the housewife in the home; and these tasks to be successfully performed must have applied to them a skilfully blended mixture of scientific knowledge, common sense, real hard work and many personal sacrifices (just like our mother's labor of love in our homes).

If the present cleavage shall lead us forward to regard the nation as a large family with members engaged in different lines of industry but having a common interest in each other's welfare then the cleavage will work good results. But if on the other hand this cleavage accentuates the class feeling no direct good can come of it.

Presented President with Steel Spike

George Munro, pioneer track layer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, received birthday congratulations on May 21 from Mr. E. W. Beatty, during the latter's recent visit in Vancouver. This meeting between one of the oldest employees and the executive head of the Canadian Pacific also marked the forty-ninth anniversary of the turning of the first sod on construction at Fort William in 1875, an event at which George Munro was present.

Another interesting co-incidence in connection with the meeting is the fact that the S. S. Quebec, which carried the handful of construction men including Mr. Munro, from Sarnia to Fort William, in May 1875, was owned and operated by the Beatty Steamship Line, of which Mr. Beatty's father, the late Mr. Henry Beatty, was president.

In 1881 when construction was begun on the last lap of the company's lines between Yale, B. C. and the Coast, Mr. Munro was given charge of track laying at Emery, B. C. and when the last and famous 'gold spike' was driven at Craigellachie by Lord Strathcona in 1885 he took possession of the steel spike which replaced the gold one and after treasuring it for the past 39 years as a keepsake presented it to Mr. Beatty.

ALBERTA

Our Short Story

JOHNEEN DUFFY
UP-TO-DATE POET

At one end of the long, rudely furnished Donegal school room presided the master; at the other, his assistant. The older coleens and gossons faced the master; the younger ones faced the assistant.

Shane O. Donnell, the biggest and most advanced pupil of the master's division, occupied the end seat. He was a fine upstanding lad with a good brain. His ambition was to be a master himself some day. At the other end of the unpainted bench sat Mary Anne Duffy, oldest of the girls. Mary Anne was a little Irish beauty with light brown hair demurely braided, delicate features and very white skin except for very red cheeks. Shane adored Mary Anne, but, big, bashful chap that he was, his adoration was still his own carefully guarded secret.

About halfway down the assistant's front row sat Mary Anne's small brother Johnneen, a slight little fellow with large head and dreamy dark eyes. As was customary in the country schools of that part of Ireland, the lessons were partly in English and partly in Gaelic.

Johnneen had a Gaelic primer, which at that particular moment was lying idly across his knees. Johnneen's eyes were set in a faraway stare, for he was listening to the master, who was loudly and excitedly declaiming Gaelic poetry to the advanced class. The little lad did not know why the master was doing it; neither could he follow all the meaning, but the sweep and surge and swing of the verse had him spellbound. It was his turn to read from the Gaelic primer, but of that he knew nothing whatever until a stinging blow across his knees from the assistant's cane brought him back with a jump and a whimper.

The master's rows were in a state of nudging, wriggling excitement, less over the poetry than over the announcement that had preceded it. The Gaelic League was to hold a feis at Letterkenny in a fortnight. Prizes were offered for poems in the elder tongue composed by school children. The master had just promised to take the author of the best poem in his school to the feis at his own expense. The lucky winner would ride on a tram and stay all night in a hotel, besides experiencing all the delights of the festival itself.

Shane's head was up and his jaw had a firmness of set that boded ill to less earnest competitors, but it was not of tram or of hotel or even of the feis that he was thinking. His dream was the gentle blue eyes of Mary Anne Duffy should shine approval on his deed. He had already chosen the wrecking of the Armada off the Irish coast as his theme, and he was determined to labor valiantly.

A week later Shane stayed after school to work at the poem. Mary Anne made an excuse of copying an exercise to linger also, and they walked home together.

"I'm sure and certain, Shane, as you will be the one to travel to Letterkenny with the master. Who else can write as well as you?"

"Would—would you be middlin' proud to think you was knowin' me, Mary Anne?"

"I would that, Shane."

A red wave surged up Shane's face to his very hair. From an inner pocket of his coat he drew forth a tawdry enamelled brooch. "I was buying you this bit brooch last fair day."

"O, Shane! it is the grandest fairing whatever! But you never gived it to me."

"I was playing ninepin with the boys—" here embarrassment chocked his utterance.

"You were playing ninepins—" she said.

"I was. The fairing fell out on me, and the boys were coddling me terrible, and I told them it was for no girl at all, but won off the man with the prizes which you throw hoops to get, and me to have no use for it."

"Barrin' the boys, would you be wishin' me to have it?"

"I would!" he asserted fervently.

"I could be keepin' it hid away until I go to America," she ventured. "When I will be fair destroyed with thinking long of home, it will mind me of an old fashioned schoolmate." Shane, fairly crazed with delight yet cautious withal, handed her the brooch. "Do not be revealing it on me beyant, or somebody might crack of it in a letter."

"I will not reveal who gived me the iligant bit brooch."

Shane wriggled with delight and relief.

"I was staying late, Shane, for the chance to ask a kindness of you."

"Put a name on it, Mary Anne, and it is yours."

"It's about Johnneen. Some folks do be thinking him not quite right in his mind, because he acts so queer; but he is right, Shane; you know he is right and fair intelligent."

"He is, Mary Anne, but he's got his own way of being smart, which sometimes looks like foolishness to the rest. Do you mind when the cow tossed him out of byre door for looking into her eyes to see what she was thinking?"

"Yes, Shane, and I mind the day when he fell out of the tail of the cart into the river because he was so took with the pretty swirls in the water he forgot to hold on."

"What do be his trouble now?"

"Worse nor anything yet. He makes queer talk to himself while herding the cow, and our mother fears him to be under some enchantment. Now would you unbeknownst to him creep up and see what you make of the master?"

"I would do more than that for you, Mary Anne as you well know."

Shane left the girl at her own door, and proceeded to stalk Johnneen by a series of boyish manoeuvres in which he took legitimate satisfaction. At last he lay flat among some bushes not more than twenty feet from the boy.

Sure enough, the lad was lisling along to himself. The chant was irregular at first with many repetitions and frequent dead stops. Shane caught a Gaelic word here and there. At last Johnneen mounted a stone and delivered himself of the incantation complete.

Shane listened spellbound to the point of forgetting himself and even Johnneen. It was only when the little lad hopped down from his rock and returned to the grazing cow that Shane remembered where he was and why. "The scalpeen!" he muttered below his breath. "The outrageous little scalpeen to be finding all that in his own head."

Then he rolled over, and his face was down on his arms among the prickly whins. The world-long battle between conscience and desire raged in his soul. He shrewdly divined that Johnneen had no idea of his own performance other than as a sinful amusement that kept him in disgrace with his family. And it wasn't shutting the doors of festival wonder on himself that he minded most; it was the shame before Mary Anne Duffy of being out-poeted in the contest by her brother of the infant class.

Shane emerged from the moral contest on the right side, but rough and excited from the inner tussle. He jumped up, leaped the ditch, and faced the startled herdsboy. "Did you find them poetries inside yourself?"

Johnneen nodded wretchedly.

"Take up your cow and come along," said Shane.

"I was —doin' no harm, Shane—"

"Get up you animal."

Johnneen obeyed. Leaving the cow in the byre, Shane marched the boy to his home hearth. Mrs. Duffy and Mary Anne were knitting by the peal fire. "What has come across Johnneen?" breathlessly inquired his mother.

Shane shook him fiercely by the collar. "We must be taking him this minute to the master, whom I believe to be lingerin' yet at the school. Come you aling and Mary Anne without waitin' for naught."

Johnneen whimpered and hung back but his mother and Mary Anne each took a hand, and resistance was futile.

The master looked up in mild astonishment from the stack of exercise books that he was correcting.

"Master" shouted Shane. "This wee gossoon has made a Gaelic poem to beat any in the whole school! You will be for takin' him to Letterkenny. I doubt not the scalpeen will be comin' back with the best prize of the feis."

"Holy saints!" ejaculated the mother. "He got it off the fairies! Mary Anne, what was I tellin' you since?"

Johnneen started with relaxed jaw; his world was whirling round him like a witches' dance. In an agony of shyness he made a dash for the door, but was captured and brought back by Shane.

"Master, you find them three rocks out in the way, named Old Women. And you mind the saying that once in seven years, at sunrise they may be startin' to the shore but if any turns eyes on them they must go to their places for another seven years of waitin'? If they was succeedin' it's three old women they would be, fit only for the almhouse. It's about them craturas the lad made his poetries. Speak it out, Johnneen, for the master."

The boy began timidly enough, but rose to the real orator's exhilaration from having an audience:

"We are three harmless old souls. Tomorrow we try again for the safe warm land.

O kind people, look not upon us. Turn your faces to the west and not to the east.

For, if unseen we reach the sand, women we are again.

Harmless old women doing ill to none. It's weary we are of waves and storms. It's weary we are of shellfish and the ide sky.

Oh, for the turf fire of the almhouse!

Oh, for the faces of other old women, wrinkled but kind!

Oh, to be kneeling in church of a

Sunday out of the wind to pray!

Oh, to leave our bones in the cosy

Mrs. Duffy frankly dabbed her eyes chuchyard at last!"

with the corner of her apron. I will not be lookin; and once they is landed it's meself that will be bringin' of 'em home for a cup of tay."

Mary Anne turned to Shane, "But your poem is the grand sounding one altogether. It cannot be that our Johnneen's is better than yours. When I hear yours I'm thinkin' what a grand composition it do be, and with Johnneen's I'm forgettin' all exceptin' them poor old craturas wearyin' out there in the salt water."

"Mary Anne, you've said it your own self. Meanin' to praise mine, you are yet condemnin' it as it deserves. Hear you that blackbird on you whin?"

"I do."

"If I was to wear out me mouth tryin' to sing what comes of the bird's nib, that would be me poem. Johnneen is the blackbird himself singin' away."

"It's perfect Gaelic verse in a most fine and uncommun verse' p——— the master, and, coming from so wee a lad, the feis will go mad over him, and the praise and presents he will be receiv ing—"

"Blessed Mother!" cried Mrs. Duffy. "It was to be seen on him all along he was no common child. He shall have boots, and I will be hakin' him a gand new pantaloons so he will look grand at the feis." With that she hustled Johnneen back to the cottage.

Mary Anne waited to thank the master, and then joined Shane, who was waiting shamefacedly outside the school door.

"Will you be great with me any more, Mary Anne, when your brother a mere infant, is excellin' me to smitherens with his bit poetries?"

he asked her anxiously.

"O, Shane! It was that iligant and generous in you to give up to Johnneen! How could you be doing that same? Why, it was like the master might have done, or Robert Emmett, or Daniel O'Connell. I'm—terrible proud—to be great—with you. I'm thinking—to be knitting you the like of some socks—"

"They would be, coming off your hands, me prize of the world," he man aged to say, "and I will not be envying Johnneen his joy of the feis."

Back with the cow, which was chewing her cud contentedly, Johnneen mounted his stone and recited the poem over and over, forgetting the promised fame and prizes in a fresh burst of joy over the thing he had made.

Here and There

A party of 50 Australian boys will be the guests of the Exhibition at Toronto from August 30th to September 3rd. They are public school boys from all parts of Australia and their visit to Toronto will be made on their way home from the British Empire Exhibition.

British Columbia is now the third manufacturing province of Canada, with 2,673 manufacturing establishments, over 41,000 employees, invested capital amounting to nearly $225,000,000 and a value of products of approximately $260,000,000, according to Government statistics.

New Brunswick in 1923 produced more coal than at any other time in her history. The output for the year exceeded that of 1922 by more than 12,000 tons and amounted to 251,091 long tons. It is estimated that this industry creates a value of over $1,100,000 annually, most of which goes out in supplies and wages for the benefit of the province.

What will probably be the last big round-up of horses in the West will take place shortly in the range country south-east of Calgary, Alberta, for the purpose of clearing the range of stray horses. The horses will be gathered in one central corral, where owners may claim their animals. It is anticipated that about 10,000 animals will be secured. The Department of Agriculture is supervising the arrangements.

Unstinted praise from prominent citizens and the press of Alberta is given the Canadian Pacific Railway in connection with the Company's recently announced branch line construction program, affecting the southern portion of the province. C. R. Mitchell, member of the Provincial Legislature for Bow Valley, describes the announcement as the most important made in many years.

"Perhaps the most noteworthy fact we discovered was the vastly improved psychology of the people of the west to that which existed a year ago," commented E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, on his return from a recent inspection of the Company's property. "They are full of hope and confidence and realize, as the east should realize, the tremendous benefit to the whole of Canada of a second consecutive large harvest."

Dear Sir:

Re Mrs. Grimstad's death and your article in the issue copied by the Lashburn Comet on May 22nd.

Mrs. Grimstad was already dead 6 to 7 hours before I was called as can be certified by those who delivered me the telephone message. She had been sick eleven days and died, no doctor having been called. It was therefore necessary to call the coroner who in turn submitted the facts to the Attorney General's department Regina, with the result that the death certificate was issued.

Thanking you if you will be good enough to print this letter over my name,

Yours truly,
D. W. GANTON, M.D.

BANK OF MONTREAL at representative points in CANADA and elsewhere

THE completion in 1886 of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a project that had received the moral and financial support of the Bank of Montreal, cast a bright ray of promise across the then somewhat troubled economic life of Canada.

Canada at last was spanned by rail from coast to coast, opening up for profitable development the fertile territory lying between.

The Bank of Montreal signalized the completion of the line by establishing a Branch at Vancouver and later at Victoria, thus completing its transcontinental chain of Branches and bringing to the Pacific Coast banking facilities essential to the successful development of the great economic potentialities there.

Of its 567 Branches, 53 are situated in the Province of British Columbia.

HOW IT HAPPENED

A philanthropist was given this version of the story of Eden. She was sitting with other children on the curb outside a public house in Shoreditch and her version of the story proceeded:

"Eve ses: 'Adam, 'ave a bite?' 'No!' ses Adam, 'I don't want a bite!' 'Garn!' ses Eve, 'go on, 'ave a bite!' I don't want a bite!' ses Adam."

The child repeated this dialogue her voice rising to a shrill shriek. "An' then Adam took a bite," she finished up, "An' the flaming angel come along with 'is sword, an' 'e ses to 'em both: 'Nah, then—ahtside!'"

Here and There

Commencing April 15th, the Canadian Pacific Railway, having in mind the expressed wishes of the majority of its patrons, has decided to revert to the custom of permitting no smoking in observation cars of its transcontinental trains.

The production of steel ingots and castings in Canada during the month of February amounted to 70,953 tons, an advance of 72 per cent over the 41,309 tons produced in January. The increase was almost wholly accounted for by the rise in the quantity of open-hearth basic steel ingots made for the use of producers.

Canadian farm products exported to the United States during February totalled $2,440,208, an increase of $961,579 over February last year, according to a report published by the Bureau of Statistics. Wheat exports to the United States were valued at $101,714 in February, as against $25,157 in February of the previous year.

Under the agreement with the Imperial Government under the Empire Settlement Act, Canada, spent $39,657 in assisted passages for some 2,653 British immigrants in the fiscal year just closed. In the past four years the Dominion Government has spent nearly $1,500,000 in promoting immigration from Great Britain to Canada.

By arrangements made by Hon. George Headley, Minister of Agriculture, a trial shipment of cows and steers will be made in the near future to Japan for the purpose of testing out the possibilities of a market for Alberta's livestock in that country. It is also the purpose of the department to send with the shipment a qualified investigator who will look into the potentialities of a market for all Albertan farm products.

For the first time in the past two or three years the Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries Limited is shipping butter in carload lots direct to the cities of the United States. A carload shipment was recently made from Saskatoon to Philadelphia. Two carloads were also shipped to Chicago, where they realized good prices. Each car contained between 25,000 and 30,000 pounds of Saskatchewan butter.

Speaking at Quebec recently, E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, summarized the magnitude of the operations of the Company. It has 15,000 miles of railway in Canada and controls 5,102 miles in the United States. It owns and operates telegraph and express systems, 13 hotels, 16 bungalow camps and rest houses, and has in commission on the Atlantic and Pacific, Canadian lakes and the British Columbia coast, 81 ships aggregating approximately 450,000 gross tons. Its personnel varies in numbers with business conditions from 65,000 to 100,000 employees in all branches of the service.

What must constitute a record in the rapid handling of an important consignment from the Orient was established recently by the Canadian Pacific Railway when shipping a quantity of silk from Yokohama to New York. The consignment, which was the largest forwarded from Asia since the recent slump in the silk market, left Yokohama on March 22nd on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Empress of Asia." Specially stowed for prompt discharge on arrival at Vancouver, the shipment was so rapidly transferred to the waiting train that only 13½ minutes per car lapsed between the docking of the ship and the departure of the fast freight and delivery was made at New York at midnight April 4th, the through time from Yokohama to New York being but 13 days, 8 hours and 13 minutes, calendar time.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

The number of big industrial undertakings projected for immediate construction on the coast of British Columbia provides a striking indication of how that province is going ahead. A $400,000 logging railway up the Shehalis River Valley, a $1,000,000 mill plant at Cheamis, a $200,000 amusement centre at Victoria and a $200,000 sawmill at Port Coquitlam, with about $10,000,000 in power plants in the Seave Lake District are some of the more important and a host of smaller projects are also under way.

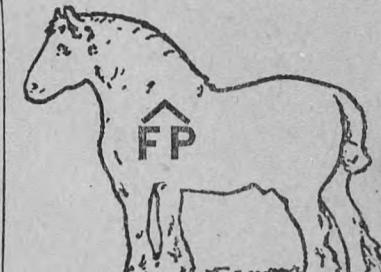

Practically all Canada's production of newsprint for export in March was absorbed by the United States. Of March shipments amounting to 127,583 tons valued at $9,756,530, the United States received 125,848 tons, valued at 9,617,823. The only other Canadian exports of newsprint of importance were 599 tons to South Africa and 1,037 tons to New Zealand. It is expected that April shipments will show an even greater proportion of consignments to the United States.

The concentration camp for immigrants to Canada and the United States maintained by the Canadian Pacific Railway and other steamship companies, is located at Southampton, England. It has an average daily attendance of 600 and, on some days, the number is about 1,000. Comfortable quarters and meals at moderate cost are provided and features of the camp are the special dining-room for Jewish passengers, the private shower baths, with towels and bathing gowns supplied and the individual rooms which are also available.
